

Project Update: October 2013

The team of the project "Conserving Tarantulas in the Atlantic Forest, Argentina" had developed the educational material about information on the tarantula species inhabiting the forest and covering general aspects of their morphology and ecology. We developed the project logo that comprised a tarantula in the centre of the Misiones province, Argentina, all in a reddish colour due to the remarkable red colour of the soil in the Atlantic Forest.

The team made t-shirts, stickers, cups and the traditional Argentinean "mate" with the project and the Rufford Small Grants Foundation logo to promote the project in schools and natural reserves administrations. Also, we bought a projector for the future workshops and informative talks in Misiones Province. Finally, we designed two illustrative posters about tarantulas that will be supplied to school's libraries and natural reserves administrations.
