

Project Update: January 2017

The project started on the beginning of March 2016. At the same time, we started with monitoring on spring bird migration that lasted until the end of May 2016. Starting from April, until the end June 2016 we have conducted complete survey on breeding birds and breeding colonies census. From August to October 2016, we organised bird ringing camp, with participation of newly interested young people and trainees. Autumn migration monitoring began in August and still lasts, also counting new arrivals on wintering. At the same time, we started monitoring and noting any kind of human activities with special attention on hunting and poaching.

In September and October 2016 seven excursions for school children and their teachers have been organised. Additionally, the EuroBirdwatch held on the first weekend of October 2016 with organised two trips and visits to the project site.

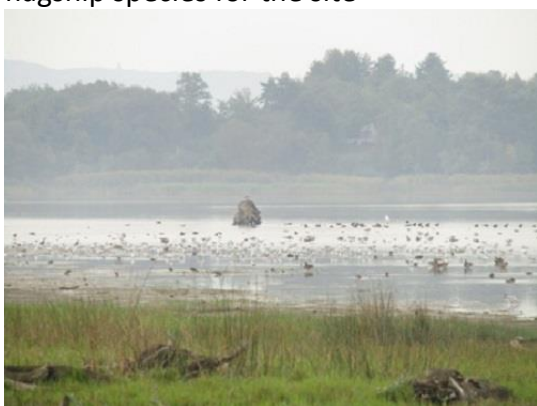

Several articles, describing the project's goals, conservation contributions and main activities were written and are currently pending to be published.

Pygmy cormorants resting - one of the flagship species for the site

Spoonbills resting and feeding

Part of the big mixed flock resting and foraging

Bird ringing, extracting birds from the mist-net

Children, school in nature

Birdwatching

White-tailed eagle on its hunting ground

School in nature

Tundra Swan, rare bird on wintering and the passage

Bird ringing

Bird ringing

Bird ringing

Just ringed pygmy cormorant

Just ringed little bittern