

Project Update: August 2016

I've been in the field in the last 2 months. At the end, I was able to collect 99 tissue samples of Artibeus jamaicensis and 73 for Glossophaga soricina. I made a workshop about methods for studying bats for new students. And this semester I'm going to be working in the lab for the molecular analysis.

Also I sent an abstract to participate in the North American Society for Bat Research in San Antonio, Texas with information of my project. I expect the University of Costa Rica can help me with the expenses to assist.

Here I'm sending some pictures of the activities.
