

Project Update: February 2020

A few months ago, we started conducting surveys of livestock producers to recognise their relationship with the native forest of the north-central province of Entre Ríos. Producers not only carry out different activities and uses of the native forest, but many of them coexist with this ecosystem, so these surveys allow us to know the perspective on the multiple benefits that the forest provides to them. Thanks to Rufford, so far, we have conducted more than 70 surveys!!
