

Project Update: October 2010

I'm pleased to inform you that I have just launched a blog site on the leopard cat project. It's still in the works though but I've posted a few entries from my journal. I thought this would be a good way to update partners and funders.

The blogs I've posted came from my journal entries, and observations. They are not confined to leopard cats alone. They also contain our personal insights, lessons learned, stories about the people we encounter, events that shape our project, and the rich local culture that surrounds us and permeate farm life.

I hope you enjoy reading these.

<http://thamaralproject.wordpress.com/>